

From the article 'Why do so many intelligent women think they are Psychic?'
The Daily Mail, 20th August 2013

Georgia Coleridge says: 'Thirty years ago, people thought yoga was odd, but they don't any more. It's the same with healing and receiving advice from those who are no longer here.'

'It's become more normal to discuss these things. We are all psychic to some degree. It's like cooking. Some people are natural cooks and hardly have to think about it, while others find it hard and so tend not to practice it very much.'

Georgia practices what she describes as 'past life healing, ancestor clearing and spirit release'.

She doesn't see spirits — but says she 'feels' them. For example, if she walks into a house where there's a 'bad atmosphere', or where a couple have been rowing, she quickly develops a stomach ache.

'I've been like this since the age of 18, but it was only after studying at the College of Psychic Studies in London that I began the work,' says Georgia.

'Most ghosts are completely normal and un frightening. They are just in the wrong place. I ask them to go away, or I get someone from the spirit world to take them away.'